RICHMOND, KY., WEDNESDAY, FEB. 3, 1915.

JUDGE J. M. BENTON.

In this issue appears the formal announcement of Judge J. M. Benton as a candidate for re-election to the office of Circuit Judge for this district. There also appears over his signature the platform on which he runs.

Judge Benton has held this office since the death of Judge Scott. He succeeded a very able jurist and one who was exceedingly popular with the people. He took up the office and conducted it as though there had been no interruption and he has acquitted himself to the entire satisfaction of his friends, and has fulfilled every prediction which they made for him. He is eminently qualified for the position, not only from a legal standpoint, but from the standpoint of general information as well. He is an extensive reader and hard student and is well prepared for the discharge of his duties in their various phases.

His reputation as a jurist has gone far beyond the confines of his district, and his name is a familiar one all over the State. He is a jurist of recognized ability. He is an exceedingly patient judge, both with litigant and lawyer, and is very accommodating to both. He dispatches business promptly and has kept his docket reasonably well cleared. In his announcement, contained in another column, he points out to the people where he has saved the State in criminal matters alone the sum of $5,000 per year. This is highly commendable and will be remembered by the voters.

Judge Benton, besides being a Madisonian, married an exceptionally handsome lovely and accomplished Madison girl, Miss Bessie Smith, a daughter of the late Dr. Curran C. Smith, of Waco. He had a large blood relationship in this county, and by his marriage he acquired another very strong relationship. On his own side of the house, as well as that of his wife, he is connected with the very best people of the county and district, men and women who were pioneers and who have always been of the best citizenship of the State.

These facts entitle Judge Benton to the careful and kindly consideration of the voters of this county, and we have no doubt that when the political conflict is over, that his friends and relatives will have made it manifest that they went to the polls.

Judge Benton made his platform broad and strong and he throws down the gauntlet to his worthy opponent.

Mrs. Jas. P. White, one of the oldest and best-known women of the county, died at 1 o'clock Monday morning at her home in the country, her death being due to pneumonia. Mrs. White was a gentle, christian woman, a kind neighbor, an affectionate wife and mother.

For many years she had been a faithful member of the Mt. Pleasant Christian church. She was nearly 72 years of age and had been married 49 years. She is survived by her aged mother, Mrs. Mary Burgen, who is 92 years old, and by her husband and seven children — Robert and Walker, and Mary W. Circuit Court Convenes.

Judge Benton Presiding.

Circuit Court opened Tuesday morning, Hon. J. M. Benton presiding, and Hon. B. A. Crutcher, Commonwealth's Attorney, on hand.

Judge Benton delivered a remarkably strong charge to the grand jury, from which we quote as follows:

"My sermon on clean elections this morning will be a brief one. This question has been urged upon the consciences of all the grand jurors of this district for the last two years and I have found them eager to act. This grand jury may find nothing to do along this line, but it is a question which must not be permitted to grow cold.

Last week I heard in a religious revival at Winchester a most impressive sermon on the subject of the Great American Sin, which the preacher said was the sin of neglect. As I listened to that remarkable sermon, I could not avoid the conviction that we people here in Kentucky, in this district, and in this county, have too long neglected the great sin of American politics, this evil, this corrupt, this criminal practice of permitting our elections to be controlled by the use of money and other corrupt means, a practice that grew up and prospered back in the old days when it was not condemned by the law, and when the public conscience had not been aroused to the enormity of it.

I have stood and will continue to stand for a rigid enforcement of the criminal laws without respect to persons, applying them to the rich and the poor, the high and the low, alike.

I have stood and will continue to stand for clean elections, demanding that election officers shall do their duty with just as all other law breakers are.

Clean elections elevate the standard of civic purity and constitute an advance step in the uplift of humanity. The public conscience has been aroused on this question and its progress must be forward, not backward. It is a great fight and I am proud to be on the right side.

I may not be able to see all the voters of the district in person, as my official duties, which I shall not neglect, demand practically all of my time. I must therefore rely largely upon my friends, in each county, to aid me in the race and guard my interests, assuring them that I shall prosecute the campaign with vigor, so that every voter in the district may be made fully acquainted with all the issues involved before he comes to cast his vote.

Gratefully, thankful for the loyalty that has been accorded me in the past, I earnestly ask the voters of the district who approve my record and feel that it merits endorsement, to again give me their cordial support, pledging to them the best service that my ripened experience enables me to give.

Respectfully,
J. M. BENTON.

Big Show at The Alhambra.

Miss Ward sings today—Wednesday. Hear her in "It's a Long Way to Tipperary." Five reels of special features will be shown. Don't miss them.

Coming Musicales.

There will be a concert given by local talent on Monday night, February 15, at the Normal Chapel, for the benefit of the Associated Charities of Richmond.

Miss Marguerite Hassemer, of the Cincinnati College of Music, violinist, and Norma Gulchinski, pianist, will be the featured artists.

These young ladies are talented in their several lines and they should, and no doubt will, be greeted by a large audience.

After 22 Years.

Mr. Wm. Mellon, the merchant prince of College Hill, after 22 years business success, has sold his stock of goods to Ginter Bros., of that place. Mr. Mellon came to take it easy for a few days, will visit his mother in California next summer and take in the Panama Exposition. Messrs. Ginter Bros. are well known and popular men and with their large connection, business ability and personal popularity will hold every dollar's worth of the house has heretofore enjoyed. Good luck to the retiring man and abundant success to the incoming ones.

Col. Perry Speaks.

The Commercial Club, together with a large number of representative citizens, assembled at the Elks' Clubroom Thursday night to hear an address from Col. R. R. Perry, of Winchester, in reference to the Boone Trail. Mr. C. F. Higgins, president of the Club, presided over the meeting and introduced the speaker in a happy way. Col. Perry is probably one of the best posted men in Kentucky on the Boone Trail, and he asserted that the same comes from Rockcastle county through the county of Madison nearly to Booneboro. He urged the people to get busy while the matter was being agitated in Congress and secure this road.

A committee was appointed, Hon. W. B. Smith, being named as the chairman, to report at a later meeting of the Club some tangible and practical method of procedure to secure the road for this county. There will be another meeting on February 11, and all our good citizens are urged to attend.

Church Notes

The attendance at the First Christian church Sunday-school was 245, a good showing Sunday. The pastor will preach Sunday morning next at the regular hour. Union service at night to welcome Rev. Reynolds, of the Baptist church.

C. W. B. M. of the First Christian church meets Wednesday; Ladies' Circle meet Thursday. Both meetings at the church at 3 p. m.

Sunday night at the Christian church a service of welcome will be held for Rev. J. R. Reynolds, the new Baptist pastor. Brief addresses will be made by the pastors, all choirs will unite in the song service and all the men of the different churches will sit in the center section of the auditorium. We hope all will join in the spirit of the occasion and give Mr. Reynolds a genuine welcome to Richmond.

Miss Lucia Burnam has presented the Sunday-school of the First Presbyterian church with a handsome piano.

At a business meeting held at the First Christian church it was decided to take a collection each Sunday night for the benefit of the Associated Charities.

There will be a meeting for ministers, Bible school teachers, superintendents and church workers in general, both men and women, at Providence Christian church, in Jessamine county, Feb. 8-12, which will be held under the auspices of the Kentucky Association of Ministers. Some notable speakers will be present, including Rev. J. W. Street, of Macinac, Ill., and Dr. H. C. Garrison, of Danville. The people of this county are cordially invited to attend.

Last Sunday morning and evening, in spite of the inclement weather, a large audience was out to hear Dr. Reynolds. His sermons are full of truth and inspiration and we would be glad to have everybody enjoy them. There will be something interesting for the young people every Sunday evening at 6 o'clock in the lecture-room.

Burglars Busy.

Burglars were out on the "pinch" last Saturday night and visited many West Main street homes. At the residence of Mrs. John F. Wagers they made a rich haul, and took from Miss Smith, a young Normal student, the sum of $51; from Miss Minnie Wagers, $3 and $1.60 from Mrs. Wagers. They also visited the home of Judge Jennings Greenleaf and rifled his clothing. From there they evidently went to the residence of Judge J. R. Burnam at about 3 o'clock, but Judge Tony Burnam, hearing them at the window, procured his revolver and proceeded with target practice, but the shots went wild. From there the thieves went to the residence of W. Neale Bennett, but secured no loot.

In Memoriam.

I feel that I cannot allow little Jennie Enright to pass beyond our vision without paying one little tribute to her memory, or speaking one word of comfort to her bereaved family. She was a sweet child, beloved by all who knew her. She remembered her Creator in the days of her youth. He who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me," has taken her to dwell with Him forever. Dear, suffering, mourning friends, weep not for her.

His violin made from the bones of a wildcat, attracted much attention and his reproduction of the music of bird and insect was profoundly interesting.

Dr. Randall of the Department of Education in Washington, whose special work is School Gardening, visited the Normal on Saturday and stayed over Sunday. He was highly pleased with work being done in our school under direction of Professor Pullen.

The third term at the Normal opened Tuesday, January 26, with the highest enrollment in the history of the school. Students began to arrive on Thursday previous to the opening day and before Wednesday night more than eight hundred people had matriculated. From one county thirty students came in a body. During the opening days, the transfer company was busy, running special transfers to take Normal students to the school. On Wednesday morning, the chapel was so crowded that the students were compelled to sit on the floor, but the authorities of the school secured 150 additional chapel chairs which were installed on Wednesday afternoon.

HOLY SHRINES OF FREEDOM

Headquarters Occupied by Washington Throughout the Country Are to Be Preserved.

THROUGH the efforts of the various patriotic societies many of the old houses made famous by Washington as his headquarters during the war of independence, have been preserved and are now suitably marked for the information of posterity. During that long struggle for freedom Washington used perhaps a hundred or more houses for this purpose in various parts of the country. Many have disappeared under the ravages of time, but about two score of them have been saved. It was in these houses that he planned his battles and strategy; it was in them that independence was achieved.

houses that were occupied by Washington. First Washington lived in the residence set apart for principals of Harvard college. Then he moved to the house of a fugitive Loyalist, John Vassall. Later this became the residence of Henry W. Longfellow, the great poet, and here were written many of his works since become world famous.

Washington had many houses in New York. None is more beautiful than the building now known as the Jumel mansion. This was his headquarters from September 16 to October 21, 1776. It is also rich in memories of Aaron Burr, who married the widow of Stephen Jumel. Jumel gained possession of the house when Roger Morris and his wife fled because their Tory sympathies threatened to get them in difficulties. It was Mrs. Morris, who as Mary Phillips, George Washington wooed in vain.

At Neshaminy, 20 miles north of Philadelphia, is a headquarters of Washington rich in historic memories. It is a rough stone building, two stories in height, located near the bridge over the Little Neshaminy creek. Here Washington held an important council of war, at which for the first time the young Marquis de Lafayette took his place as one of Washington's advisers.

MAKING THE BEST OF IT

Washington's Birthplace Gone. Washington was born February 22, 1732, at Bridges Creek, Westmoreland county, Va. The home in which he was born burned down in 1755. No vestige remains, only a stone placed there by George Washington Parke Custis to mark the site of the "old low-pitched farm house."

THE COUNTY FAIR

By Peter Radford
Lecturer National Farmers' Union

The farmer gets more out of the fair than anyone else. The fair to a city man is an entertainment; to a farmer it is education. Let us take a stroll through the fair grounds and linger a moment at a few of the points of greatest interest. We will first visit the mechanical department and hold communion with the world's greatest thinkers.

You are now attending a congress of the mental giants in mechanical science of all ages. They are addressing you in tongues of iron and steel and in language mute and powerful tell an eloquent story of the world's progress. The inventive geniuses are the most valuable farm hands we have and they perform an enduring service to mankind. We can all help others for a brief period while we live, but it takes a master mind to tower into the realm of science and light a torch of progress that will illuminate the pathway of civilization for future generations. The men who gave us the sickle, the binder, the cotton gin and hundreds of other valuable inventions work in every field on earth and will continue their labors as long as time. Their bright intellects have conquered death and they will live and serve mankind on and on forever, without money and without price. They have shown us how grand and noble it is to work for others; they have also taught us lessons in economy and efficiency, how to make one hour do the work of two or more; have lengthened our lives, multiplied our opportunities and taken toil off the back of humanity.

They are the most practical men the world ever produced. Their inventions have stood the acid test of utility and efficiency. Like all useful men, they do not seek publicity, yet millions of machines sing their praises from every harvest field on earth and as many plows turn the soil in mute applause of their marvelous achievements.

FARMER RADFORD ON WOMAN SUFFRAGE

The home is the greatest contribution of women to the world, the hearthstone is her throne. Our social structure is built around her, and social righteousness is in her charge. Her beautiful life lights the skies of hope and her refinement is the charm of twentieth century civilization. Her grace and her power are the cumulative products of generations of queenly conquest, and her crown of exalted womanhood is jeweled with the wisdom of saintly mothers. She has been a great factor in the glory of our country, and her noble achievements should not be marred or her hallowed influence blighted by the coarser duties of citizenship. American civility should never permit her to hear the burdens of defending and maintaining government, but should preserve her unsullied from the allied influences of politics, and protect her from the weighty responsibilities of the sordid affairs of life that will crush her ideals and lower her standards. The motherhood of the farm is our inspiration, she is the guardian of our domestic welfare and a guide to a higher life, but directing the affairs of government is not within woman's sphere, and political gossip would cause her to neglect the home, forget to mend our clothes and burn the biscuits.

RURAL SOCIAL CENTERS

We need social centers where our young people can be entertained, amused and instructed under the direction of cultured, clean and competent leadership, where aesthetic surroundings stir the love for the beautiful, where art charges the atmosphere with inspiration and power, and innocent amusements instruct and brighten their lives.

To hold our young people on the farm we must make farm life more attractive as well as the business of farming more remunerative. The school house should be the social unit, properly equipped for nourishing and building character, so that the lives of our people can properly function around it and become supplied with the necessary elements of human thought and activity.

SECOND EPISODE.

In Pursuit of the Runaway Bride

CHAPTER I.

THE runaway bride, who led the chase, seemed to be lucky, for the traffic, before her like magic and closed behind her like a wall. As she turned into Central park at Fifty-ninth street, safe from immediate pursuit, the black Vandyked man's car was in a snarl at Fifth-sixth. As he came out of that pocket he leaned forward, after a look ahead, and spoke crisply to his driver. They stopped at the Plaza hotel, and the man, hurrying up the steps, suddenly paused. With a smile he drew from his pocket a tiny gold watch and opened it. Inside the lid was the picture of a beautiful young girl with a handsome collar. The black Vandyked man gazed at the picture for a moment in frowning meditation. It was the runaway bride.

As he entered the hotel Ned's taxi, with the fluttering white ribbons, passed and turned into the park just as June Warner turned out of it at Seventy-second street, heading for Riverside drive.

At that hour Iris Blithering sat pouring her voluble sadness into the ears of Bobbie in the Blithering home on Riverside drive. She had been school day chum and the bosom friend of June Moore, but now there was no June Moore, only a June Warner, and June Warner might become a stranger.

"Rot," observed Bobbie. "How long are they going to be gone?"

"Three weeks. It's an eternity, Bobbie!"

"Rot," said Bobbie. "Why doesn't somebody answer that doorbell?"

It had only just rung, and immediately the hollow Blithering hatter came through. He did not return to announce any one, however. Instead the caller rushed straight in and threw herself into the arms of Iris.

"June!" Blithering stood by and watched the tableau for a moment; then he went to the door and looked out.

"Where's Ned?" he quite naturally inquired.

The only answer was a sob.

"June!" pleaded Iris, "where's Ned?"

"I—I left Ned!" June wailed. "I ran away!"

"Aw, I say!" protested Bobbie.

"What did he do, dear?" This from Iris.

"He—he gave me money!"

"He gave you money!" Iris repeated.

"Yes," June straightened up as she recognized the difficulty which lay before her. Iris, while a warm and loyal friend, was not exactly a thoughtful person nor a sensitive one and might perhaps not understand the deep ethical significance of what had happened. Bobbie didn't count.

"Just after the wedding breakfast mother gave me a purse, and if I had not left that on the library table at home I might not have known my predicament until it was too late. When Ned and I were on the train, however, I missed the purse. While I was telling Ned about it he tipped the porter and caught Ned by the arm. "Where is my girl?"

"Then she isn't here?" gasped Ned.

"Come inside." John Moore's voice had lost all its color. He led the way into the library. "Now, what is all this about? Why are you here alone?"

"I don't know. June is somewhere in New York. I was in hopes you had heard from her."

"We did! She telegraphed to Iris that she had lost her purse. Iris left her with it to mail it to June."

"Then that's where she is!" There was relief in Ned's voice.

"Sit down," said Moore. "Why are you not with her?"

"I don't know." There was a choke in Ned's voice. "She left me on the train—slipped away at Farnville."

"She wouldn't do such a thing without good cause!" declared Mrs. Moore with firm conviction.

"What happened?" This sharply from Moore.

"I don't understand. She told me she lost her purse. I gave her some money, and she went to sleep with her head on my shoulder. I pilloved her more comfortably on the seat by and by and went into the smoker. I dro-

"Oh!" gasped June as the significance of the tableau suddenly dawned upon her. Why, they were almost in the same position in which she had seen herself when she was Ned's pitiable little beggar.

"Thanks, Bobbie," said Iris and turned to June. "If you want more, honey, in your struggle for independence, come right back, and I'll make Bobbie give it to us."

June shrank away. "Oh, I can't possibly take it! I didn't know you were going to ask Bobbie!"

"Where else do I get it?" blurted the bosom friend. "Bobbie's the easiest way."

"That's just it," June pointed out. "Can't you see what a beggar a dependent woman is? Don't you see that if I can't accept a gift of money from my husband I can't possibly let you accept for me a gift of money from your husband? Don't be angry, Iris, please. I'm fighting for a principle."

"Oh, Mr. Thomas Rot!" exploded Bobbie.

"That attitude is at the bottom of the whole thing, Bobbie," argued June, with spirit. "Because the man has supported the woman for ages he has made himself the master. That destroys the woman's self respect, and love dies."

"She's a fine kid," said Bobbie heartily, "but if she's going to draw the line on money which has been handed from a man to a woman she'll have to get it fresh from the mint."

"What will you do, June?" fretted Iris.

"If I only had that purse mummy gave me," mused June.

"She got that from your father," Bobbie was unkind enough to remind June.

"Oh, that was daddy's money," she brightly replied, "no trace of concern on her brow, 'and it's the last I can take from them now that I'm married. Iris, couldn't you go out to the house and say you'll send it to me?"

"Just the thing!" Iris was bubbling immediately with enthusiasm. "We'll go right out now. Bobbie, call the car."

"You mustn't let them know I'm here," warned June. "You mustn't let any one know!"

Within five minutes Iris and Bobbie in the swift little runabout were headed for Brynport. In the library June had found a picture of Ned among some other intimate photographs, and it was with constant reference to this and amid constant talking to it and constant cursing of it that she penned her important message.

My Dear, Dear Ned—I cannot explain in a letter what happened today. When I am free, dear Ned, I will make you understand and forgive. You must not try to find your unhappy bride.

JUNE.

CHAPTER II.

AUNT DEBBY came around the corner of the Moore house in all her glory—stiff lavender dress with the red posies on it, yellow hair with the green feather, tan shoes and blue stockings.

"Howdy, Aunt Debby!" Bobbie Blithering, with his chattel beside him, swung up the drive in his fast little runabout.

June's parents came to the door. John J. Moore in the blue and tan smoking jacket which he had refused to wear until tenderness at June's approach brought him to it, and Charlotte Moore in the gray silk dress embroidered by June's own hands.

"Come right in," heartily invited Father Moore, and Mother Moore, with soft eyes, shook Bobbie by one hand and Iris by both.

"We have only a minute to stay," began Iris, starting to talk as they went into the library. "I heard from June. Iris bent over and kissed Moore. In the parlor, came straight over."

"She missed her purse," blithely went on Iris, while Bobbie eyed her with admiration. "She's afraid she lost it. Did she leave it here?"

"Right on that table," And Mrs. Moore's eyes sparkled. She took it from a drawer in a desk.

"That girl always was careless about money," laughed Mr. Moore as if it were a virtue.

Bobbie glanced at Iris. She was as serene as a plate of ice cream.

"I'll send it to her," offered Iris, and Mrs. Moore smilingly put it in her hand.

"Why didn't June wire us?" puzzled Father, his fists bulging in the pockets of his gray smoking jacket.

"Yes, why didn't she?" Mother's voice was full of anxiety, but as she saw the untroubled expression of Iris Blithering's face she began to bridle.

"If June could wire her friend, why couldn't she wire her mother?"

"You have such slow delivery out here," promptly explained Iris.

"Just what did she say?"

Iris cast her eyes to the ceiling and began telling off the words on her fingers.

"Phone mother I can't find my purse. Did I forget it? Extremely sorry. Bushels of love to all. June."

"Yes, why didn't she?" Mother's voice was full of anxiety, but as she saw the untroubled expression of Iris Blithering's face she began to bridle.

ped in to look at her about every five minutes, and when I came back after we had passed Farnville she was gone. She left the money on the seat. Here it is." And he showed them the three crumpled bills, one partly torn.

"How do you know she returned to New York?" demanded Moore.

"I saw her. I got off at the next station and telephoned. The station master at Farnville reported that he saw her getting on a down train. I took an express and overhauled her as we came into the Grand Central station. I saw her leave the station and get into a taxi."

"You are holding something back!" Moore charged. "I want to know the truth!"

"You have all I can tell you," declared Ned. He would not tell them about the black Vandyked man, and June was Mrs. Warner now.

"Will you get your wraps, please, Charlotte?" June's father finally said, and rose. "We are going to Iris. I'll order the car."

They were grim and silent as they sped away.

While they rode the black Vandyked man, in Sherry's, sat at the end of a long table between a jovial host with a gray mustache and a ponderous man with heavily lidded eyes and short hair.

There were a dozen placed at the table, and wine hissed at every plate, but the others of the party, which included a half dozen vivacious and gayly gowning young women, were dancing. The three men talked in low tones, their heads bent together, and the black Vandyked man was the most silent. Finally he began to talk and grew enthusiastic, and presently he drew forth June's little gold watch. Then he flashed open the lid. All three men bent eagerly over it. They gazed upon the lovely features of the runaway bride, their faces bent close together. They clapped the black Vandyked man on the shoulder.

It was during this time that June Warner, sitting quietly in a corner of the library with Bobbie and Iris and with her mother's purse still in her hand, heard a familiar voice in the vestibule.

"Daddy!" She dashed from her chair in a flash and went upstairs to her room.

"Where's June?" Mrs. Moore had pushed through ahead of the men.

John Moore walked straight to Bobbie Blithering and shook an awe-inspiring finger at that young man.

"Where's my girl?" he demanded. Bobbie slowly straightened.

"Well, she's here," he said. "What of it?"

"I'll tell you what of it!" said Iris. "June has decided not to see any of you just yet, and she won't!"

"Iris," begged Mrs. Moore, "what does it all mean?"

Iris took two letters from the mantel. She gave one to Ned and one to Mrs. Moore.

"Why are you here alone?"

Moore. Her husband looked over her shoulder. The letter was addressed to Ned.

Dear Daddy and Mummy—I cannot explain in a letter why I was compelled to leave Ned. Some day I will make you understand and forgive. Please be good to dear Ned and love.

YOUR LITTLE JUNE.

"Here's the man!" shouted Ned, his voice full of sudden fury. He held a pair of gloves in one hand and a card in the other. "These are June's gloves. They were lying on the table, and this card was in them."

"They're my gloves!" called Iris, but Ned laughed at her. There was no mistaking those dainty, blue embroidered bits of white kid.

"Now, I'll tell you," went on Ned. "This man, Gilbert Blye, whom I met on my way home from the first time, was with her from the moment she left me until she came here. He is a tall, black Vandyked man, and at Farnville he was seen assisting June on the down train. I saw them myself through the car window talking together. I want to find Gilbert Blye! Are you hiding him too?" And he turned savagely on Iris.

Bobbie lounged forward. "That'll do, Ned!" he warned. "Iris, call the car!"

"June!" They heard Iris throwing doors open and running through the house, calling June. Ned darted up the stairs, but in the hall Iris met him with a frightened face. "She's gone!"

They all searched for her then, but there was no trace of her.

CHAPTER III.

MRS. GILBERT BLYE was in shrill voiced converse with a big green parrot, which, from length and sharpness of nose and height of eye arches, might have been a sister to her. A maid announced that some one had wanted to see Mr. Blye, and, since he was not at home, would Mrs. Blye care to say where he was? He came to New York on an early train.

Mrs. Blye rose instantly. She called straight into the hall and confronted the five earnest visitors. "Did you say Mr. Blye returned on an early train?"

"Yes," Ned tried not to speak curtly. "I saw him."

"I am Mrs. Blye. Is there anything I can do for you?" The lady was studying the group with a shrewlike penetration. Mrs. Blye began to worry herself. Also she began to suspect that last was her specialty. "If you will tell me the nature of your business with Mr. Blye I may be able to locate him."

"I want my daughter!" blurted out John Moore, his lips quivering.

"Oh!" And Mrs. Blye's voice rose. "Your daughter?" She glared at them for a moment. "Will you please wait?" she asked and sailed back through the hall. They could hear her sharp voice telephoning. She had called her husband's club, and they heard her exclaiming, "Where's Gilbert?"

"Miss Moore!" he called, but June's

She was back, blazing. She had her hat in her hand. "He's at Sherry's!"

Mrs. Gilbert Blye Was in Shrill Voice Conversing With a Big Green Parrot, she shrilled.

An electric coupe stood at the door. She slammed into that, turned on the lights and rolled away with as much vigor as was in the capacity of her machine. Bobbie's runabout darted after her and passed her and then came the limousine with Mr. and Mrs. Moore and Ned.

Poor June! It had been hard for her to leave those beloved voices down the street in the library, but she had made up her mind very firmly that neither she nor Ned could be happy if she was always to feel that she was a chattel. She ran back to the desk for Ned's photograph, then stepped lightly out on the tiny side porch, jumped down to the little embankment and fled, as light as a thistle-down, along the side of the house and out at the little grocer's gate.

Where now should she go? The apartment, their home, Ned's and Ned's! She hurried on in that direction, but at the first corner she stopped for an instant and darted over toward Broadway. She had realized three things almost simultaneously—first, that they might come out of the Blithering house at any instant and see her; second, that she had no key and, third, that Ned might come there. It would be the most likely place for him to go in his loneliness.

In fond memory, stopping at the drug corner, she went over each of the dear rooms, furnished just to fit her and delight her—the white and gold reception room, the white and rose drawing room, the white and black library, the white and blue bedroom, the all white kitchen. She saw Ned in every room and herself there. Now flushed and happy she was experimenting with the toy range, now they were dialog together all alone. She was playfully feeding Ned, and he was seasoning the meal with stolen kisses, waiting clear around the table to get them. They were spending an evening of blissful companionship in the library.

She suddenly held her handkerchief to her mouth to choke back a sob. On Broadway she halted a passing taxi.

All was sparkling at Sherry's, but Gilbert Blye had taken small share in the hilarity. He had risen to go when a black eyed young woman, the most vivacious of the party, called him to task for his evening of secret scheming. "You're up to some devilment," she charged, playfully shaking his beard. "Come and dance with me."

"Sorry, Tommy," he told her, with that queer smile on his lips, "but I've a previous engagement."

"She can wait," pouted the girl. She dragged Blye away from the table.

"Take my car, Gil!" called the gray mustached host.

"Certainly," replied Blye, and the three men exchanged a smile. "I'll dance one round with Tommy; then I'll go."

Before that round was over, however, Gilbert Blye saw an apparition in the doorway, and his face turned cold. The apparition was a tall, angular woman with a long, high nose and high arched brows, who was trying to bore Gilbert Blye through and through with a double eyed glare of burning ferocity. He hurried over to his wife. She had shrilled:

"Who is that woman?" One lean, long finger pointed accusingly at the vicious black eyed thing with whom Gil had been dancing.

"I shall explain nothing," said Gilbert. "I'm through!"

He left her contemptuously, leaving her stunned by this unexpected revolt. As he went down the steps he heard her shrieking something after him, and he hurried. As he dashed out of the door he ran into a group who were coming in. They were the Moores, the Blitherings and Ned Warner, and he was upon them and past them and jumping into the luxuriously furnished racing limousine with the little watch in his hand, before they realized that this was the man they were seeking.

"There he goes!" cried Ned. "The second!"

Blye, moving rapidly away, saw the confusion and blamed his wife for the scene, for now she was in the lead of the excited group, which was rushing toward him.

The house of the Moores at Brynport was dark when June arrived, the dear old home, its steeple back and the dim turrets, with a dignity and beauty which she had never before thoroughly appreciated, and at the gate she hesitated as if, with no one to welcome her, she had no right here. There was a welcome, though, and a joyous one, a loud, hearty one, a series of delighted barks from her dog Bouncer.

The hole through which he usually emerged had been found and closed, but he wasted no time on that. He merely came through the window, bringing a part of the ash with him, and here he was running circles around her, leaping at her, crouching, barking at the top of his voice, doing everything in his power to show her that she was a welcome visitor at this place and in his heart at any hour of the night or day.

He had known her very presence from far back in the shed.

It was the work of a minute for June to clamber through an unlocked kitchen window and to rush upstairs, get her maid, Marie, seize several garments and drag with her the astounded servant.

"Miss June! Miss June!" cried Aunt Debby, out of breath from running, but June only waved a hand at her as the taxi swept out of the drive.

A limousine had stopped in front of the house, and a black Vandyked man had alighted.

"Miss Moore!" he called, but June's

taxi rattled on. He jumped in his own car and gave the word and start.

Where Now Should She Go? In swift pursuit.

The two machines were still in sight when the runabout of Bobbie and Iris dashed around the circle.

"Is June here?" called Iris.

"Laudy, no!" puffed Aunt Debby. "Dat's her gals' yander!"

The runabout was gone with a whizz, and immediately after came the family limousine.

"Is June here?" called all three of the occupants at once.

"She's just done gone! The gentleman with black whiskers has just done gone! Mr. Bobbie and Miss Iris has just done gone! Whoo!"

Around the corner there rolled an electric coupe. It was brilliantly lighted, and in it sat an angular woman with a high, long nose and high arched brows, beneath which glittered two sharp eyes.

"Say!" shrilled the occupant of the electric.

Aunt Debby, her broad hand on her stomach, pointed down the road.

FACES CHANGE WITH FASHION

Remarkable Transformation to Be Noted as the Styles of the Seasons Vary.

Have you noticed how fashions in clothes and fashions in faces go hand in hand?

For instance, year before last, I think it was, when the vampire face was rampant, the mysteriously pulled down hat completely shadowing the eyes came in vogue. At this time the slim, slit, seductive clothes were worn, and a stranger walking along one of our principal streets must have had the impression that some dread disease had taken hold of nearly all of our young girls.

Next year, a transformation! The vampire shed her slinky garments and sophistication and became the sweetest little chocolate-eating doll with an "oh-what-a-wicked-world!" expression on her pretty little pink-cheeked face. And if you remember rightly it was at this season that the youthful short-waisted dresses, dainty slippers and all sorts of fluffy things appeared.

We seem to have reached a normal condition this season. I have seen more clear-eyed, red-cheeked, healthy-looking girls in the very sanest clothes imaginable, than I can remember seeing for a long, long time. If we could only make the health fad a habit! The clothes are awfully pretty this year, and they cry for a good healthy body and fine carriage to fit them.

If we imitate a thing long and hard enough we must eventually either become that thing or something very near to it. Hence, if we assume a wholesome, normal expression of face and body—don't you see what I mean? And doesn't it make you creep to think of the consequences of having any but the health fad become in-growing?

But I can't decide whether the clothes make the faces or the faces influence the clothes. I think it's only another case of the chicken and the egg.—New York Times.

FULL SKIRT HAS WON PLACE

Not as Yet Fully Adopted, but Many of the Smart Dressers Have Taken It Up.

With the short coat and its military collar the skirt varies, but the full skirt without a tunic claims precedence in the very smartest models and is gradually making itself more and more felt, though for the great mass of winter frocks and suits the long tunic in one form or another will hold good. Paris sponsored the plain full skirt early in the season and the later models emphasize the idea, but the earliest showing here leaned rather to the tunic models, and American women are slow in accepting the newer skirt.

And yet one sees it worn here and there wherever smartly dressed women congregate, and it is featured more and more prominently in shops of the better class. One afternoon during the American fashion show at the Ritz Carlton, in New York, a group of five well-known actresses happened to foregather on the stairway, and each of the five was wearing a version of the plain full skirt.

SPRING COSTUME

Heavy blue gabardine, trimmed with striped mullin cuffs and collar. Hat: blue velvet with white silk band.

Braids of All Widths. Braids of all widths are worn and many think that the military influence has been responsible for this craze, but it will be remembered that as late as last summer both Worth and Jenny showed models that were braided.

"I See In the Paper"
Is the Way Many Conversations Begin. If Your Advertisement Were There It Would Be Seen Too.

Murmurous Indexing. Indexers have been responsible for many errors, but possibly the strangest example of curious indexing occurs in a law book. Turning over its index, a correspondent of the London Chronicle noted the entry: "Best, Mr. Justice, His Great Mind," and referred to the page brought this: "Mr. Justice Best said he had a great mind to commit the witness for contempt of court."

A can can't see why the bedbug was ever created. But that is just what a flea thinks about a hairless dog.

Some men divide their time between being mean to their wives and being nice to other women.

Daughter selects sheer nainsook with baby ribbon rosettes and hand embroidered medallions when she buys a new combination. But mother wants something substantial that will make good scrub rags after it is worn out.

A woman can take one look at another woman and tell whether she is a real blond or a peroxide affair. But a man has to marry her before he can tell the difference.

The reason a princess knows that she is going to make a grand housekeeper when she gets married is because she can find a handkerchief by passing it on the mirror of her bedroom dresser.

The sort of man who would feel contaminated if his clothes touched yours here on earth is the same lad who is always hoping that he will meet you in heaven.

You can't tell anything about a woman. She will spend two hours roasting her husband and telling him what a no account two cent pup he is until he gets mad and slams the door and goes out. Then she will sit down and write a long letter to her mother and tell her what a grand man her husband is, and how thoughtful and generous he is, and how happy they are.

When one of the children is seriously ill father will tell mother to go to bed and he will stay up. Then father will sit around and read for a few hours and then sneak off to bed. And as soon as mother hears father snoring she will get up and watch the child all night and then prepare breakfast as though nothing had happened. And father will go downtown and go around hunting for sympathy by stating that he didn't get a wink of sleep all night because he had to stay up and nurse a sick child.

Any real boy can wear out three pairs of shoes while he is wearing out one box of shoe polish.

Burbank Smith in Demand.

Prof. G. D. Smith, of Eastern Normal, has been called to McGreary county, to lay out a big orchard for the Stearns Coal & Lumber Co. About 25 acres will be set out as a trial orchard.

A Poem by Mr. Stott.

Last Sunday one of Mr. Roscoe Gilmore Stott's poems, which had appeared in an Eastern magazine for January, was reprinted in full in the New York Sun. A prominent newspaper circuit, with headquarters in Chicago, is to publish a review of "The Man Sings," by Prof. Stott, of the Normal, in 95 newspapers, together with his picture. The author declares this latter feature is hard on the standing of the press, but means publicity.

Cut This Out Now.

If you don't want it today, you may next week. Send this advertisement and 5 cents to Foley & Co., Chicago, Ill., writing your name and address clearly. You receive in return three trial packages—Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for coughs, colds, croup and grippe; Foley's Kidney Pills, for weak or disordered kidneys or bladder; Foley Cathartic Tablets, a pleasant, wholesome and cleansing purgative, just the thing for winter's sluggish bowels and torpid liver. These well known standard remedies for sale by all dealers.—Adv. Feb.

Helm Speaks.

During general debate on the Agricultural Bill, Mr. Helm, of the 8th Kentucky district, addressed the House at some length and among other things stated that the farmer, like the lawyer, doctor and all other professional men, must keep abreast of the times by application of strict business methods. He showed any number of instances how better returns could be obtained on the same amount of land with less labor and expense.

The speech was brim-full of good suggestions and ideas on improved methods of farming and stock raising, stating instances of three crops in one season as one of the ways of supporting large families on small farms. He said that 20,000,000 men under arms in Europe have been fed from American products; suggesting "full steam ahead" by way of great energy and larger acreage, suggesting the getting away from tobacco and less acreage for next season on account of its injury to the soil and the demoralization of the foreign market, due to the foreign war.

Song of The Leaders of Kentucky.

The following beautiful song was written by Miss Lelia E. Partridge, Supervisor of Practicing and Teaching at the Normal, and will be read with interest by her circle of admiring friends:

Air: "We're Tinting Tonight on the Old Camp Ground."

We're thinking today of our dear old State Of what it has been in the past; Of the record high its history shows, Of the glory that record cast.

Many are the names we're proud of today—

Kentucky's roll of fame.

Many were the leaders in days of old, And we cherish each great name.

Refrain—We're thinking today, talking today,

Singing of our dear old State.

We're thinking today of our dear old State How it fell from its high place,

How it lost its step on the onward march, How it took the laggard's place.

Many were the years that it lingered behind,

While forward the great world swung.

Many were the children that through their lives,

To bare existence clung.

Refrain—We're thinking today, grieving today,

Mourning for our dear old State.

We're thinking today of our dear old State Of its future, not its past,

For the children's cry hath snapped the spell,

Kentucky roused at last.

Many are the minds that are working today—

Minds that can will and plan;

Many are the souls that are eager to serve,

And uplift the children of men.

Refrain—We're planning today, working today,

Praying for our dear old State.

—Lelia E. Partridge.

Catarrah a Danger Sign. Hyomei The Remedy—Guaranteed By B. L. Middleton.

There is no more annoying, likewise serious ailment than catarrah, which is indicated by sniffing, raising of mucus and frequent colds. If it is not cured it will surely affect the lining of the air passages, and frequently destroys the hearing.

Hyomei is the effective and reliable remedy for all catarrah ills—you breathe it, using a small inhaler that comes with every complete outfit. The anti-septic medication of Hyomei simply has to reach all the sore, raw and inflamed surfaces of the air passages. Its healing begins at once—you feel better after the first treatment—even almost hopeless cases respond quickly.

BRUTUS WHITE.

Died, at his home in Madison county, Kentucky, on the Barnes Mill pike, four miles west of Richmond, on Sunday, January 17, 1915, Bro. Brutus White, having lived to a good old age. Just as soon as Richmond Lodge, No. 25, was informed of his death, the Worshipful Master appointed a committee, composed of Bros. W. Crutcher, T. T. Covington and D. B. Shackelford, to prepare and present suitable resolutions in regard to the life-work and character of our deceased brother. Bro. White was born in Madison county in the month of May, 1829, consequently would have attained to the advanced age of 86 years the coming May. Truly Bro. White has come to his grave in a full age, like as a "sheaf of corn cometh in his season."

Bro. White was made a Mason at Kingston Lodge in early manhood and retained membership in said Lodge until a year or so ago, when he took membership with Richmond Lodge No. 25, and though enfeebled by years and denied the privilege of regular attendance upon the stated meetings, he never lost interest in Masonic teachings and the principles which it inculcates. He was familiarly and reverently called "Uncle Brutus" by his friends and neighbors. Bro. White imbibed the cardinal virtues of Free Masonry early in life and retained and practiced them during his long and useful life. Especially was he temperate in speech. He had no patience with gossip or scandal-mongers and all such victims found in Brother White a charitable defender. He was a remarkably well-balanced man and his counsel and advice was frequently sought by his friends and neighbors. In his home life he was a faithful and devoted husband and father and a widow, three sons and five daughters remain to mourn his loss. To these we extend our sincere sympathies.

Brother White was buried with Masonic honors by the Richmond Lodge on Monday, Jan'y 18, 1915, in Richmond Cemetery, and though it was a very disagreeable day, as in life, so in death, he was honored by a large crowd of brethren and friends at both the funeral and burial services.

Resolved, That this paper be read at the next regular meeting of Richmond Lodge No. 25, and that they be spread upon the minutes of said Lodge and that the Richmond papers be requested to publish same, and that a copy be sent to the widow and each son and daughter of our deceased Brother.

Done by order of Richmond Lodge No. 25, January 27, 1915.

A Great Sunday Night Service At Christian Church!

Last Sunday evening, despite the inclement weather, another large group of the members of Mr. Turley's class was present and added much to the interest of the service. Apart from them a good sized congregation was present. The pastor spoke on "The Man Who Lost His Grip," and gave an account of the life of Eli, the prophet. These services are creating a great deal of interest.

LOCAL ITEMS.

Our young friends, Matt Cohen and R. P. Fox, Jr., have formed a co-partnership. The firm will handle trotters, saddlers and team horses.

Our neighboring city of Lancaster has caught the fever and will have a graded school in the near future. A special election will be held to elect a board of trustees Feb. 9. We congratulate the city on its prospects.

Harvey Cobb, of Red House, has been seriously ill with pneumonia, but we are glad to state that he is about well and will be in town in a few days with a number of good jokes that he has been fixing up while he was sick and had little else to do. Harvey is good for 25 years or so yet. We can't do without him.

Henry Reddick and wife, colored, were arrested at Lancaster Friday last charged with burning the Hotel Miller, New Year day, in which E. A. Pascoe, his child and mother-in-law, Mrs. Masters, were burned to death. Public opinion has believed all the time that it was the work of an incendiary and a detective was engaged to investigate the crime.

John L. Alverson and Miss Maude Marshall, of Washington, D. C., were married Saturday last as per announcement made by our contemporaries. The bride is the daughter of Col. T. R. Marshall, proprietor of the Loekean Hotel, Washington. The groom is a Richmond boy, who started in life as a printer in the Register office. He now holds a position in the Government printing office. He has a brother with the Stanford Interior Journal, who was once a compositor in the Climax office. We join with the Register in wishing them a "happy journey over sunlit seas."

PERSONAL.

Colds are Often Most Serious—Stop Possible Complications.

The disregard of a cold has often brought many a regret. The fact of sneezing, coughing, or a fever should be warning enough that your system needs immediate attention. Certainly Loss of Sleep is most serious. It is a warning given by Nature. It is a man's duty to himself to assist by doing his part. Dr. King's New Discovery is based on a scientific analysis of Colds. 50c at your Druggist. Buy a bottle to-day.—Adv. Feb.

Moonlight Schools.

We have received a lengthy communication from Madame Piotrowska, principal of the Moonlight School, giving in detail the beginning, the conduct and the conclusion of the school which was conducted in this city. The same is too long for publication in this issue, and we give excerpts from the same.

First, the city school board offered the school building for the use of this school. Second, the registration was not what it was expected to be, but there was a general average attendance of about 25. This work was divided into two departments—the elementary and the advanced—and also a department of Domestic Science.

The school closed Dec. 11th, much to the regret of pupils and teachers, both regular and temporary, who had devoted themselves to this noble work.

Arrangements have been made whereby the school will be continued, and the rooms have been generously donated to it by Mrs. James Bennett and are located over Perry's drug store. The same will be furnished by using the chairs of the Women's Club and other equipment will be added by Oldman & Lackey, Owen McKee and the Normal Training Department. Mr. D. B. Shackelford contributed some hardware and Mrs. L. R. Blanton a cart-load of coal. The material for the Domestic Science department has been donated by Mr. Allen Zaring, Owen McKee, Joe Giunchigliani, Covington & Tbarpe, McKinney & Deatherage, R. H. McKinney, E. S. Wiggins, Mrs. S. B. Hume and Mrs. Lyman.

The social feature of the school has been well cared for by Miss E. French, Mrs. I. Hugely, Mrs. G. D. Smith, Mrs. J. G. Crabbe and Miss Emma Watts. The regular list of teachers was occasionally assisted by some of the ladies of the city.

The communication concludes with this paragraph: "All beginning is humble, but the right thing begun in the right way always grows. In fact one good thing grows from another. The pay night school class has just bought $2.50 worth of books to circulate among its members, the idea is to loan them, under proper restrictions, to all willing readers whose homes are too small for private libraries. We hope that the fortunate owners of such libraries will look over their supplies of books and send us what they will. This may be the beginning of the Richmond free library. Are we too small for that? Everything is as big or as small as the heart that regulates it and the heart of Richmond is growing bigger every day."

All books, donations or communications should be addressed to the headquarters of The Associated Charities, 221 W. Main street, Richmond.

The Liver Regulates The Body.

A Sluggish Liver Needs Care.

Some one has said that people with Chronic Liver Complaint should be shut up away from humanity, for they are pessimists and see through a "glass darkly." Why? Because mental states depend upon physical states. Biliousness, Headaches, Dizziness and Constipation disappear after using Dr. King's New Liver Pills. 25c at your Druggist.—Adv. Feb.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local appliances, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by restoring the inflamed mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a running ear, which is often attended with a discharge. The inflammation can be removed and the tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be restored. This is not a new discovery, but a method of curing deafness that has been used for years. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.
